It uses Qt as GUI framework, and employs Azure cloud services for communication. It was written to run either on Windows, Linux, Mac OS and Android. Our users are informed to simply download the App from the Windows Store (in Windows 10) to get the latest version of the application. I have been asked by the user that I need to programmatically tell the user to activate the Windows Store. Is it possible to trigger a specific piece of code in the application that would notify the user that he/she should download the Windows Store? A: If you use a local machine with Windows 10 version 16
